THE FOLLY CURRENT

Gardens are a reoccurring theme in James Justin Burke's musical life. The songwriter tends to an ever-growing plot of heartfelt tunes, tilling their verses and melodies with positive energy. He's built his name as both a solid guitarist and strong vocalist. And after a decade of leading rock bands, he's stepping out with his new company behind Southern Son. So Far, a nine-song debut album of heartfelt Americana, soul, and country ballads.

Joining Burke in James Justin & Co. are two long-time collaborators and childhood friends, Bailey

Horsley's banjo playing is heard throughout Southern Son. So Far, adding bluegrass flavor to JJB classics like "Turn This Thing Around." Rounding out the trio, Tom Propst offers both his steady upright bass lines and the third in a trio of impeccable vocal harmonies.

"If I could be a rose in the garden, I would be burning red," Burke sings on opening track, "In the Garden." Like a flower opening to the morning sun, when James Justin & Co. take the stage, it's a palpable celebration of life.

Biography

Southern Son, So Far {2010}

SOUTHERN SON, SO FAR

A nine-song debut album of heartfelt Americana, soul, and country ballads. Recorded at Johns Island, S.C.'s Plowground Productions Studios, the solo album also features

Band of Horses' Ben Bridwell singing harmonies on "The Rescue", while fellow Folly Beach favorites, Dangermuffin, back him on "I Know You Will." "The songs grew, like a child. I would feel love, frustration, and being proud & inspired from the recording process. I knew this collection would have a combining theme that people could be emotionally attached to."

1. In the Garden
2. The Rescue
3. Free Love
4. Count On Me
5. Just a Dream
6. I Know You Will
7. You're Not Alone
8. Turn This Thing Around
9. Chaser Boy
